In-Text Citations

for articles

An in-text citation appears in parentheses at the end of the sentence. It contains the author's last name and the page number, if available.

The study showed more than a ten percent increase (Smith 22).

If there are two or three authors, list them all.

(Smith and Luke 22)

(Smith, Luke, and Perro 22)

If there are more than three authors, use the first author's last name and "et al." which means "and others."

(Smith et al. 22)

If your source does not include the author's name, use the name of the organization that produced the source.

(USDA 22)

If the organization is not credited as the author, use the title of the source. Titles are always in quotation marks.

("Obesity Rates in Children" 22)

If the title is lengthy, you can use the first few words for brevity.

("Obesity Rates" 22)

If the source does not include a page number, leave it off. Do not assign your own page numbers.

(Smith)

If you are using more than one source from an author, use the title after the author to avoid confusion.

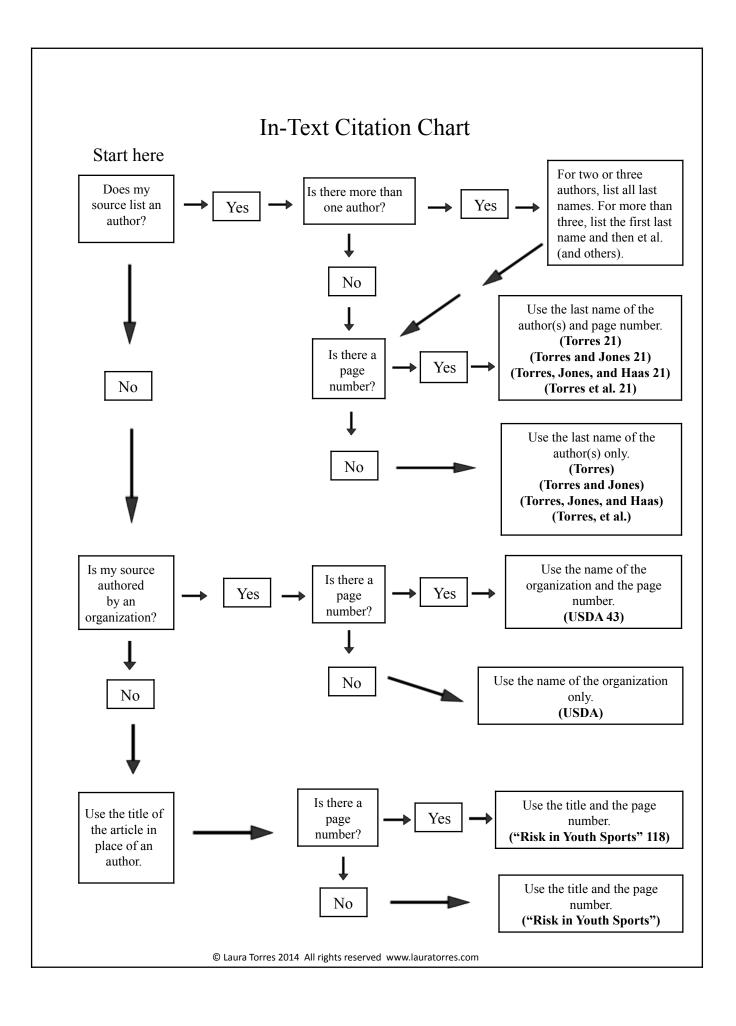

(Smith, "Obesity Rates" 22)

If you mention the name of the author in the sentence, you do not need to repeat it in the citation

According to Smith, obesity rates are rising (22).

The period goes after the citation, even when using quotation marks.

The results were "highly unusual" (Smith 22).

Thank you for purchasing this product.

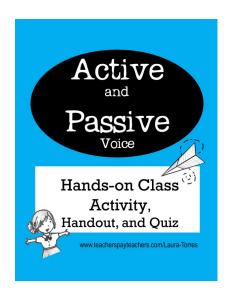

© Laura Torres 2014

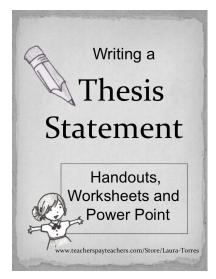

The original purchaser of this document is granted permission to reproduce the pages in needed quantities for the purchaser's classroom only. Minor editing is allowed; the document remains under copyright even when edited.

Duplication for other classes or by other teachers or for use in wide distribution as within a school district or on the internet in any form is strictly forbidden.

Violations are subject to the penalties of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act.

Visit my store for more great resources www.teacherspayteachers.com/Store/Laura-Torres